In times like these, there is a desperate need to communicate to our daughters the ancient and biblical truths of femininity, courage, and virtue. Until recently, it was difficult to find books that would inspire our daughters to embrace such values. That is why home-school graduate Tracy Leininger applied her talents to her love of history and produced these delightful volumes for girls ages fourteen and under.

Regina Leininger

Regina Leininger

Frontier Pioneer

In the early Colonial days when Pennsylvania's western frontier was still a wild, unsettled territory, Regina Leininger and her family came from Germany to the farthest outpost on the frontier to start a new life. With their own hands they built a log cabin nestled between two large maples near the crystal waters of Penn's Creek. Little did they know of the ensuing conflict between England and France which erupted into the French and Indian War. This bloody struggle brought terror and tragedy to the Leininger family when local Indians, incited by the French, kidnapped nine-year-old Regina. Through nine years of harsh Indian captivity, little Regina remembered God's Word, hidden in her heart, and clung to her Savior. Regina's life is a story of undaunted trust in her Lord, a testimony of God's faithfulness and the undying bond of love between a daughter and her mother.

Regina's Colonial Frontier Dress

Imagine Liberty dressed in a German-style colonial dress as a brave frontier girl. She might have a full day's work harvesting corn in the field or helping her mother by the warm cabin hearth, but Liberty will look like a colonial girl in Regina's full, two-layered dress with its laced-up bodice. Perhaps you will braid Liberty's hair and tie it across her head like German girls of the time. Liberty will be challenged in her faith as she acts out Regina's exciting story of enduring trust in her Savior. Dress, apron, and hat included.

Alone, Yet Not Alone: The Story of Barbara Leininger

By Tracy Leininger

The Leininger family settled deep within America's new frontier in the Blue Mountains of Pennsylvania. A sudden Indian raid changed their lives forever. This story retells the heroic and daring escape of Barbara Leininger and the touching reunion with her sister, Regina, after nine years. It also gives us an endearing portrayal of the love between family members and the strength of childhood memories. Father and Mother Leininger's commitment to "hide" God's Word in the hearts of their children yielded the fruit of an enduring faith in their Savior. Barbara and Regina held firmly to the belief that they were never alone, even in their darkest hour.

*And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has wiped out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight, or the gloom of the grave:
And the star-spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.*

—The Star-Spangled Banner

The Betsy Ross Flag

It was the British attack on American forces at Fort Mchenry on September 13, 1814 that inspired 35-year-old, poet-lawyer Francis Scott Key to write the poem which was to become our national anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner." A more recent September initiated a resurgence of appreciation for our beautiful symbol of freedom.

Our Lord has given us this country. The Pilgrims were the first "stepping stones." The Founding Fathers articulated the vision. The pioneers carried it West. The confederates sacrificed for its unity. Let us pick up the Star-Spangled Banner and carry on the dream. 71943 | $38

Dolley Madison

Dolley Madison

Gracious First Lady

"She looked a queen. . . It would be absolutely impossible for anyone to behave with more perfect propriety than she did. Unassuming, dignity, sweetness, grace. It seems to me that such manners would disarm envy itself, and conciliate even enemies." So wrote Dolley Madison's biographer, Mrs. Samuel H. Smith, after observing the first lady at James Madison's Inaugural Ball of 1809. Dolley Madison was the most popular and beloved of our American first ladies. Her Christian character, kindness, generosity, and open hospitality endeared her to everyone who met her—even those who disagreed with her husband's politics. Dolley's natural hospitality made her a popular hostess and the perfect helpmate for her husband, who was rather shy and had a difficult time talking to strangers. Dolley is still remembered as the most beloved First Lady in American history, and her charity and graciousness are models for American girlhood today.

Dolley Madison Doll Dress

All little girls love to dress up and one of Liberty's favorite dresses is her white, lacy empire dress, just like Dolley Madison would have worn. Dolley loved elegant simplicity due to her Quaker background, preferring to use beautiful fabrics rather than ostentatious trimming or dazzling embellishments. As a result, she always looked queenly, and her admirers said that her quiet dignity commanded respect. Now Liberty can dress like First Lady Dolley Madison in her delicate white empire dress with its royal blue waistline sash and soft, gauze purse and scarf. Liberty will be the "leading lady" at any social doll event.

Nan Harper

Faithful Daughter and Titanic Survivor

Nan Harper was just a young girl when her father, Pastor John Harper, announced the exciting news that she would be accompanying him on a journey to America on the grandest ship ever constructed, the R.M.S. Titanic. Equally exciting was the purpose of the trip: to preach the Gospel in the United States of America. She loved her father dearly and had learned from him to trust God who controls the destinies of all men. How could she have known that on April 14, 1912, the same wonderful ship which was bringing her to America would hit an iceberg and take the life of her beloved father? Later she would learn that her father was leading men to Christ even as they froze together in the North Atlantic icefields. Nan lived and purposed to perpetuate her father's legacy of Gospel devotion and personal evangelism.

Sacagawea

Sacagawea

Devoted Frontier Guide

Sacagawea is the perfect example of a persevering woman who rose above difficult circumstances, demonstrating enormous character at a critical moment in American history.

Kidnapped by a neighboring tribe when she was only eleven years old, Sacagawea grew up far away from her beloved Shoshone family. Called "Birdwoman" by the Hidatsa who had captured her, Sacagawea was married to a French trapper, Charbonneau. One year later, Merriweather Lewis and William Clark hired Charbonneau to lead them through the dangerous western mountains on their expedition to the Pacific Ocean.

She carried her infant son—named after John the Baptist—on her back throughout the entire journey. In addition to serving as a guide and translator for Lewis and Clark, she washed, gathered food and medicinal herbs, cooked, and even saved a box of crucial supplies when their boat capsized.

Sacagawea Doll Dress

This year marks the beginning of the 200th anniversary of Lewis and Clark's famous expedition. With the Beautiful Girlhood Indian tunic, Liberty can dress up as Sacagawea in the tribal dress of the Hidatsa Indians which she wore for much of her life. She can help Lewis and Clark navigate on their adventurous journey of westward expansion.

Our Sacagawea tunic is made of soft suede cloth, trimmed with beads and fringe at hem and sleeves. Belt included.

Trail Pouch

This trail pouch would have been used to store edible berries, plants, and dried fruits on the long journey westward. It is made to loop comfortably over your wrist and store things you might find along your own trail! Sacagawea would have worn a leather bag like this and used it to carry plants known for their healing properties. Native American women collected various herbs and roots that were helpful in curing cuts or easing a headache. Sacagawea had been taught from girlhood how to find these plants and use them to aid others. 10068 | $12

Priscilla Mullins

Faithful Pilgrim

In 1620, 18-year-old Priscilla Mullins boarded the Mayflower with her parents for one of the most important journeys in history. As with all great adventures, her journey was fraught with hardship and danger. Priscilla's deep, abiding faith in God and her ability to persevere carried her through some of the greatest challenges a young woman would ever encounter. Before the ship landed, her father died, followed by the death of both her mother and brother. As a member of the Pilgrim expedition, she knew there would be challenges including danger from savage Indians, famine, and disease. But Priscilla placed her faith in God. History records that she busied herself helping women, nursing the sick, and tending gardens. She is famous for her marriage to John Alden, with whom she enjoyed a long and happy union and bore eleven children. The Bible of John and Priscilla exists to this day. Its well-worn pages attest to their family's devotion to Scripture.
